list night occurred when the train was running about twenty-live miles an hour, having slowed down on account of the double trucking naw in progress, and was composed of engine 142 express car, mail car, combination car, two may coaches, three sleepers and President M. E. Ingalia' private car.

The express car was smashed up. The mail car and combination cars left their trucks, the former lying on the tender and front end of the latter was threwn up over the rear end of the mail car. None of the other cars was damaged much.

The freight train contained a number of cars loaded with stock, of which about fifty head were killed. Both engines were hadly damaged and the track was blocked for about four hours.
